Overview

Anna Maurer advises companies and entrepreneurs in and out of court on all issues relating to individual and collective labor law.

After the various stages of her legal clerkship, among others in a large German commercial law firm, she worked as a research assistant in the employment law team of an international company in Berlin. There she was confronted with a wide range of labor law issues and gained experience, among other things, in works council law.

After completing her education in Germany, she also studied in Scotland (University of Dundee) and France (Université Toulouse 1 Capitole).
