Overview

Chris Coombes joined GQ|Littler in April 2020, having trained and qualified at international law firm Baker McKenzie. During his training contract at Baker McKenzie, Chris completed seats in the employment, private equity and corporate tax departments. Chris also gained valuable experience in data protection during a three-month secondment, which was primarily focused on preparing for the implementation of the GDPR.

Chris works across all areas of employment law including advisory, litigation and transactional support. Chris also regularly supports on employment projects with an international focus.

Clients in Legal 500 (2023) say, "Chris Coombes is a rising star, having been virtually seconded to one of our businesses for most of the year. What makes the difference is that GQ|Littler understand our business structure and the varying influences on decision making around the companies."
