Overview

Diana León represents and advises employers in a wide array of employment law matters.

Prior to joining Littler, Diana was an associate at a national insurance defense firm. Her practice focused on professional liability defense, defending licensed professionals against claims of professional malpractice and breach of fiduciary duty; and employment defense, defending employers against various claims including discrimination, harassment, wrongful termination, retaliation, and failure to accommodate. Previously, Diana was an associate at a general liability insurance defense firm, defending commercially insured clients in personal injury, products liability, premises liability, construction defect, and breach of contract matters.

As an evening student at Loyola, Diana achieved her law degree by working during the day and attending courses at night. While attending law school, Diana worked at the Alliance for Children's Rights and then served as a law clerk at an insurance defense firm. Diana competed in the Hispanic National Bar Association moot court competition, served as a board member of La Raza de Loyola, and completed an externship with the Cancer Legal Resource Center.
