Overview

Jonas Bloch's passion for employment law issues was awakened during his studies at the University of Wuerzburg, Germany. Finding the conflicting interests of employees and employers and developing tailor-made strategies for his clients particularly appeals to him. For this reason, Jonas chose labor law as his major field of study and as an elective during his legal clerkship at the Bamberg Higher Regional Court. He gained his first practical experience during his legal clerkship in the labor law department of a large company, where he became familiar with working with the works council in particular.
