Overview

José L. Maymí-González advises clients on various aspects of labor and employment law. He represents clients before state courts and administrative forums, such as the Fair Labor Standards Bureau, defending employers against claims of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, and other employment-related issues.

During law school, José served as digital director of the UPR Law Review and as vice president of the UPR Litigation Association. He honed his litigation skills and gained experience by working in the school's legal aid clinic and by participating in various moot courts, such as the Estrella Trial Advocacy Competition and the Velázquez Debate Competition. José also worked as a student law clerk for Judge Francisco A. Besosa in the U.S. District Court for the District of Puerto Rico and as a student law intern at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

Prior to joining law school, José served for six years in the U.S. Army National Guard as an infantryman and was awarded a recognition as the Battalion's outstanding soldier in 2018.
