Overview

With a keen awareness of the opportunities and challenges posed in multilingual and multicultural workforces, and direct experience in helping clients resolve the same, Marissa Dragoo focuses her legal career on developing and facilitating training and learning tools to strengthen leadership and increase engagement for employers of all sizes. Her extensive background in handling a variety of employment issues including harassment, discrimination, wrongful termination, class actions, and wage and hour disputes has allowed her to develop a keen eye for potential problem areas in the workplace.

Marissa regularly partners with clients to ensure training products and services meet each client's unique needs and incorporate the firm's best legal practices and cutting-edge learning techniques. Together with the Littler Learning Group, Marissa has co-developed an award winning anti-harassment suite of courses with Kantola Training Solutions to meet clients eLearning needs in anti-harassment space. She has conducted training and employment counseling for thousands of executives, decision-makers, human resource professionals and employees throughout the United States and across the globe. In addition to creating turnkey training solutions, Marissa has assisted a variety of clients with the following:

- Co-developing customized solutions with HR teams and in-house employment counsel to meet specific organizational needs
- Conducting live in-person and web-based “train-the-trainer” sessions for HR teams and training facilitators
- Conducting 1:1 executive coaching sessions with leadership team members
- Conducting live in-person and web-based anti-harassment training sessions in Spanish and English
- Strategic planning with in-house legal counsel and HR teams for customized training implementation, including hybrid eLearning and live training
- Co-developing customized video vignettes for specific client target audience in English and Spanish
- Developing client-specific, turn-key educational materials that allow companies to self-drive their internal anti-harassment and related employment law programs

Marissa distinguishes herself from many of her peers through her ability to handle employment training and compliance matters involving a multilingual and multicultural workforce. Born in Mexico, and as a native Spanish-speaker, she is able to appreciate the cultural differences and nuances inherent when communicating with Spanish-speaking employees. This advantage enables her to successfully train multicultural workforces and raise awareness of common and costly legal pitfalls for her employer clients.

Prior to turning her focus on training and preventative solutions, Marissa was a successful litigator with extensive experience representing clients in federal and state courts and in administrative settings. Her notable successes include obtaining an all defense verdict on behalf of a Fortune 20 company in a jury trial involving sexual harassment claims and obtaining an all-defense verdict on behalf of a San Diego hotelier in a trial involving improper employee classification issues. Additionally, Marissa previously represented clients in administrative hearings, court appearances, and depositions.

Marissa is a member of the Littler Learning Group (LLG), the firm’s training division. Marissa is dedicated to continually building her skills and broadening her horizons. She recently completed the Executive Coaching Program at the Berkeley Executive Coaching Institute. During her undergraduate education, she participated in a Summer Study program at the University of Cambridge, England.
