THE GLOBAL EMPLOYER Latin America Conference

3rd Annual

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20

TIME	TOPIC
7:45 am – 8:45 am	Registration & Breakfast
8:45 am – 9:00 am	Welcome Remarks
9:00 am – 10:00 am	Ahead of the Legal Curve: The Top Employment & Labor Trends to Watch in Latin America in 2014
	Latin America is a place of unparalleled opportunity and attendant risks. Consisting of a terrific roster of preeminent Littler attorneys and practitioners from the U.S. and Latin America, this interactive panel will provide you with a unique opportunity to understand the latest trends and legal developments in the labor and employment law field impacting your operations in Latin America, to help your business thrive in the region and prepare you for the challenges that lie ahead.
10:00 am – 10:15 am	Coffee Break
10:15 am – 11:25 am	Evaluating the Impact of Mexico's Labor Law Reform and Other Recent Legal Developments on Companies Conducting Business in Mexico
	Recent major amendments to Mexico's labor code and other laws impacting the workplace have substantially altered the legal landscape for companies conducting business in Mexico. Led by attorneys and practitioners specialized in the area, this session will evaluate the impact of these new laws and provide solutions to the new challenges that companies face.
11:30 am – 12:30 pm	Hiring, Firing and Managing Your Workforce in Central America, with Special Focus in Costa Rica, El Salvador and Panama
	Central America, as a home to a substantial number of major businesses in multiple industries, is a thriving economy. Even so, many of its laws have failed to keep up with a modern economic system and workplace. This informative session will provide cutting edge employment solutions to hiring and firing; use of independent contractors and manpower companies; expat assignments; and other important challenges; with special focus on Costa Rica, El Salvador and Panama.
12:35 pm – 1:55 pm	Luncheon/Guest Speaker
2:00 pm – 3:15 pm	Risks and Rewards of Doing Business in Venezuela and Colombia
	Venezuela and Colombia, although sharing a border, could not be further apart on many pro-business vis-à-vis pro- employee protections under their respective employment law regimes. This session will explore employment solutions to the risks and challenges of doing business in these divergent legal systems, including an overview of recent changes in the legal landscape impacting the employment sector.
3:15 pm – 3:45 pm	Coffee Break
3:45 pm – 5:00 pm	Managing Your "ABC's": International Assignments and Other Challenges for Multinational Employers in Argentina, Brazil and Chile
	This interactive session provides legal and practical guidance on structuring foreign assignments and crafting employment and business practices that are compliant with the ever-challenging laws of Argentina, Brazil and Chile. Topics for discussion include hiring and firing; use of independent contractors and manpower companies; expat assignments; multiple-plaintiff litigation; and key practices to avoid liability in the region.
5:00 pm – 6:00 pm	Break
6:00 pm – 6:30 pm	Reception
6:30 pm	Dinner

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 21

Image Across the Globe         What steps can an employer take to protect the global brand when conducting cross-border business in high risk regions?         This lively and informative presentation will explore employment solutions to protect the corporation's global image, analyzing critical tends and developments in the field of employment and labor law on the topic.         9:15 am - 10:15 am       Managing Reputational Risks Linked to the Supply Chain in High-Risk Emerging Markets         As a result of the Bangladesh factory collapse of April 2013, pressure has mounted on companies to sign on international agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate brand.         The New Data Protection Juggernaut: Time for Multinationals to Address Workplace Privacy in Latin America or Risk Damaging Their Corporate Brand         The trend towards broad data protection regulation in Latin American accelerated in 2013 as Colombia and Costa Rica became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border Litagaton         10:15 am - 10:30 am       Coffee Break         10:30 am - 11:30 am       Establishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation         10:41 cm - 41:32 gray       So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Globa Implementing intern	TIME	ΤΟΡΙΟ
Image Across the Globe       What steps can an employer take to protect the global brand when conducting cross-border business in high risk regions? This lively and informative presentation will explore employment solutions to protect the corporation's global image, analyzing critical trends and developments in the field of employment and labor law on the topic.         9:15 am - 10:15 am       Managing Reputational Risks Linked to the Supply Chain in High-Risk Emerging Markets         As a result of the Bangladesh factory collapse of April 2013, pressure has mounted on companies to sign on international agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate social responsibility programs and strategies to minimize risks, promote labor fairness and protect the corporate brand.         The New Data Protection Juggernaut: Time for Multinationals to Address Workplace Privacy in Latin America our Risk Damaging Their Corporate Brand         The trend towards broad data protection regulation in Latin American accelerated in 2013 as Colombia and Costa Rica became the fifth american our their swith enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employer, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful privacy program, handling security breaches, and understanding the enforcement environment.         10:15 am - 10:30 am       Establishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation         10:30 am - 11:30 am       Establishing Sound Policies	7:30 am – 8:30 am	Registration & Breakfast
This lively and informative presentation will explore employment solutions to protect the corporation's global image, analyzing critical tends and developments in the field of employment and labor law on the topic.         9:15 am - 10:15 am       Managing Reputational Risks Linked to the Supply Chain in High-Risk Emerging Markets         As a result of the Bangladesh factory collapse of April 2013, pressure has mounted on companies to sign on international agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate social responsibility programs and strategies to minimize risks, promote labor fairness and protect the corporate brand.         The New Data Protection Juggernaut: Time for Multinationals to Address Workplace Privacy in Latin America or Risk Damaging Their Corporate Brand         The trend towards broad data protection regulation in Latin American accelerated in 2013 as Colombia and Costa Rica became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical inplications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful privacy program, handling security breaches, and understanding the enforcement environment.         10:15 am - 10:30 am       Establishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation         With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discus unique con	8:30 am – 9:15 am	Protecting the Global Brand: Crafting Effective Employment Law Solutions to Protect Your Corporate Image Across the Globe
As a result of the Bangladesh factory collapse of April 2013, pressure has mounted on companies to sign on international agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate social responsibility programs and strategies to minimize risks, promote labor fairness and protect the corporate brand.The New Data Protection Juggernaut: Time for Multinationals to Address Workplace Privacy in Latin agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate social responsibility programs and strategies to minimize risks, promote labor fairness and protect the corporate brand.         The New Data Protection Juggernaut: Time for Multinationals to Address Workplace Privacy in Latin America or Risk Damaging Their Corporate Brand         The trend towards broad data protection regulation in Latin American accelerated in 2013 as Colombia and Costa Rica became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful privacy program, handling security breaches, and understanding the enforcement environment.         10:15 am – 10:30 am       Coffee Break         10:30 am – 11:30 am       Establishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation         With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.         So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Globaa Impleme	9:15 am – 10:15 am	Managing Reputational Risks Linked to the Supply Chain in High-Risk Emerging Markets
America or Risk Damaging Their Corporate BrandThe trend towards broad data protection regulation in Latin American accelerated in 2013 as Colombia and Costa Rica became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful privacy program, handling security breaches, and understanding the enforcement environment.10:15 am - 10:30 amCoffee Break10:30 am - 11:30 amEstablishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Global Implementation and Enforcement Gap Crafting corporate policies and code of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.11:35 am - 12:35 pmThe Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils Just as companies ar		agreements to manage their supply chains. Taking into account the legal landscape in high-risk regions, this session will discuss employment solutions for developing and implementing successful corporate social responsibility programs and became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful privacy program, handling security breaches, and understanding the enforcement environment.10:15 am - 10:30 amCoffee Break10:30 am - 11:30 amEstablishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Global Implementation and Enforcement Gap Crafting corporate policies and codes of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.11:35 am - 12:35 pmThe Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to 10:30 am - 11:30 amEstablishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Global Implementation and Enforcement Gap Crafting corporate policies and codes of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.11:35 am – 12:35 pmThe Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to		became the fifth and sixth Latin American countries with enforceable privacy legislation and Mexico began imposing substantial penalties. Led by experts in the field, this panel will address key compliance obligations and their practical implications for multinational employers, including restrictions on cross-border data transfers, developing a successful
With expansion of operations into Latin America and other regions comes the challenge of protecting the company from potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Globa Implementation and Enforcement Gap Crafting corporate policies and codes of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational 	10:15 am – 10:30 am	Coffee Break potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting international e-discovery.So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Globa Implementation and Enforcement Gap Crafting corporate policies and codes of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.11:35 am – 12:35 pmThe Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to	10:30 am – 11:30 am	Establishing Sound Policies and Practices to Weather Cross-Border Litigation
Implementation and Enforcement GapCrafting corporate policies and codes of conduct, while challenging, is just half the battle. Many multinational corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.11:35 am – 12:35 pmThe Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to		potential legal liability from a cross-border dispute. This session will discuss unique considerations for implementing strategic plans when facing a cross-border litigation, including litigation budgets and costs, extraterritorial reach of U.S. laws, enforceability of forum selection and choice of law clauses, as well as the preservation of evidence and conducting
<ul> <li>corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This session will provide practical guidance for bridging the implementation and enforcement gap.</li> <li>11:35 am – 12:35 pm</li> <li>The Rising Storm: Protecting the Global Brand Amid the Rise of International Trade Unions and Works Councils         <ul> <li>Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to</li> </ul> </li> </ul>		So You Have Crafted Corporate Policies and Codes of Conduct. Now What? How to Close the Global Implementation and Enforcement Gap
Works Councils           Just as companies are becoming global, various trade unions are globalizing their reach and drawing global attention to		corporations fall short in best practice for implementing and enforcing their corporate policies at a global level. This 11:35 am – 12:35 pm
local labor disputes arising in Latin America and other regions. This panel will discuss how companies can protect their global brand amid international law (including OECD Guidelines, ILO and human rights conventions) and international union activities.		local labor disputes arising in Latin America and other regions. This panel will discuss how companies can protect their global brand amid international law (including OECD Guidelines, ILO and human rights conventions) and international
12:35 pm Luncheon/Guest Speaker	12:35 pm	Luncheon/Guest Speaker
1:35 pm Conference Adjourns	1:35 pm	Conference Adjourns