Overview

Matt Morris has nearly a decade of experience representing employers in litigation and advisory matters. His broad practice focuses on defending employers against all manner of claims, including claims of discrimination, harassment, breach of contract, and wrongful termination under both California and federal law. Matt also manages and defends employers in large-scale wage and hour class actions, as well as lawsuits brought under California's Private Attorneys General Act. He provides strategic advice on compliance with various employment regulations, ensuring smooth corporate operations and workforce management.

Matt prioritizes business-oriented solutions in his practice. This approach, as well as his ability to navigate complex legal landscapes, has earned him the trust of institutional clients, including publicly traded companies and multinational corporations, with clients in the media and film, telecommunication, healthcare, logistics, and automotive industries.
