Overview

Matthew Maler advocates for clients in all aspects of labor and employment law through all stages of litigation, before state and federal courts and administrative bodies.

His litigation experience includes representing clients in alternative dispute resolution (mediation and arbitration) through discovery and dispositive motion practice and through trial and post-trial proceedings. As a former appellate research attorney, Matt also represents clients facing writ petitions, appeals, and other review of judicial and administrative decisions.

Matt's litigation experience also expands beyond defending clients in litigation, administrative actions, and labor disputes. He has also prosecuted actions on behalf of clients. This comprehensive experience prosecuting and defending civil actions informs Matt's ability to thoroughly advise clients either facing or seeking to bring lawsuits and other actions.

Prior to joining Littler, Matt served as a research attorney for the California Fifth District Court of Appeal, where he advised the justices in complex civil appeals. Matt also worked at a large law firm practicing complex commercial litigation.
